Dear Mr. Garrison,

I trust that this will find you thoroughly convalescent; and that the meetings on Monday and Tuesday may prove all that can be desired in every respect. Our arrangements here seem to be tolerably complete; our hopes tolerably bright; our prospects tolerably good. I would have written you to Frankfort again; but there was nothing particularly new to communicate. All here thoroughly concurred in your remarks respecting Liverpool. Mr Albright was there on business, and I went down expressly to look round. Cotton is down; and Liverpool seems more intensely itself than ever. Mr Trimble was and is doubtless keenly alive to the whole matter; and will, I doubt not, 'act, as we ^{are} ~~were~~ anxious to act, viz: with due regard for your personal honours and ~~mind~~ relations.

We have invited him to come up to our Meetings; but have not yet received his answer.

I forwarded word to Mr Rae that you quite approved of the change of days for the Meetings at the Institute and at 337, Strand.

Inclosed are clippings from Birmingham Local Papers, all of which seem willing to lend a hand; and copies of other things.

If you can spare time to write a few lines on Saturday, addressed to me as above, I shall be thankful; as I shall necessarily be engaged here until after our meetings on the 17th. I am glad that they hope to give to you a hearty and multitudinous reception at Leeds.

I am, Dear Mr Garrison, yours very truly

Thos. Phillips

Wm Lloyd Garrison, Esq.
